In the Great Cloister of Canterbury Cathedral, scratched into one of the study benches, is a medieval game called nine holes. The aim of the game is to get three tokens in a row.

The game - 9 holes

Rules

• Each player takes it in turns to play a token.

• When all the tokens are on the board, each player takes it in turns to move a token.

• You can move any of your tokens but you can only move along the lines of the board.